Jānis Purmalietis

Our life has as much meaning as we are needed by someone.

To walk, to breathe, to travel – isn't it enjoyable? To have seeing eyes and hearing ears when walking or driving through the city and nature paths in its vicinity (the Vasenieki swamp, Zlēkas..), to stop and bless, to let your heart unfold. It is pleasing to eradicate and distribute what belongs to us and know there is someone who gets it. Yesterday is gone. Tomorrow is not yet here. Only today is what belongs to us. Let us start now!

Juris Kroičs

I am a connoisseur of Livonian history and castles in Latvia. I used to live in St. Petersburg where I built solid knowledge about the basics of art and architecture. Ventspils was easier for me, because I am a tour-guide in Riga and Cēsis, too. Walking tour in the old town and the Livonian Order Castle are my favourites in Ventspils.

Māra Kraule

I especially love to guide tours in German and I know that visitors from Germany appreciate it: they can hear my narration about our city and country in their native language, and often this allows them to start loving our country like I do. I was born in Kurzeme; however, my roots are in Latgale, and this is why the Latgalian language is dear to me: when there are guests from Latgale, I take the chance of both listening to the sounds of this language and exercising my Latgalian.

Oļegs Mihailovs

The history of a city is like an open book: someone will enjoy only the nice-looking cover, while someone else will want to read the book from the beginning to the end; someone will merely look at the pictures, while someone else will think over each single line. Everybody who has read this book will learn many new things about our city. If you read this book together with me, you will find it more enjoyable and thrilling.
